

Digby Brown Solicitors is Scotland's largest personal injury practice and is the only firm in Scotland to be ranked Tier 1 for Personal Injury work by the prestigious Legal 500 Guide to the UK Legal Profession.

We have been top ranked for Personal Injury work by the Legal 500 guide for the last ten years and have been the only firm to be top ranked in this field in each of the last four years.

From our seven offices in Glasgow, Edinburgh, Dundee, Kirkcaldy, Inverness, Aberdeen and Ayr, we cover the length and breadth of the country.

It is difficult to imagine or understand the consequences for someone who is affected by a serious injury.

Digby Brown has been helping people across Scotland who have sustained a serious injury as a result of negligence, and their families, for over 40 years. Our serious injury department fully comprehends the life changing challenges ahead.

Our experience has shown us that in cases of serious injury such as limb loss, a specialist solicitor is vital. We are here to provide expert help in our field and do everything we can to help in other ways.

Seeking rightful and fair compensation is just one aspect of the package of measures which needs to be considered and implemented to try and ensure that the process of rehabilitation and adjustment can start.

We can immediately provide assistance and support on statutory benefits and how to access local authority services through our in-house welfare rights service. We can make a real difference by arranging private rehabilitation, by assessing housing needs, and, most importantly, implementation of care and case management regimes where required.

We are always happy to chat and give advice on your personal circumstances and the prospect of a legal remedy for injuries you have suffered from through no fault of your own.
